FINE FARM FOR SALE!

NEAR CHAMBLISSBURG, VA.

Having decided to retire from business I will, on June 11, 1894 offer for sale, at public auction, my farm, lying on Beaver-dam creek, in the county of Bedford, about half way between Chambliasburg and Stewartswille, about twelve miles from Roanoke and ten miles from Vinton, and within half a mile of the proposed Mineral Belt railroad leading from Roanoke to Danville. The farm consists of 187 acres-159 in the ner good land and fine timber! The cleared hard is in a fine state of improvement—most all in grass. One handred acres boutom land worth $100 per acre; good frame dwelling of nine roons—the roof; all necessary outhouses in road repair, a fine well of water near the door; good fareing. Everything considered I don't think there is a better farm in the county, Mills, school and churches near by, Good neighborhood.

ASPARAGUS FOR PROFIT.

How to Gather and Bunch This Crop For Market-Two Good Bunchers

If your market price is equally remunerative for shoots green their entire length, then allow them to grow six or eight inches high and cut at the ground surface, using a sharp knife for the purpose. In the opinion of some consumers asparagus is more tender and better flavored when used in this condition than when more or less blanched. However, the grower must cater to his customers' tastes. Where blanched shoots are desired, Ohio Farmer advises plac-ing four or five inches of short litter over the rows early in the spring, making sufficiently compact to exclude light and air, and as soon as the shoots appear through this break them off at the bottom of the litter.

As the cutting proceeds no thin or misshapen shoots must be left standing, whether for use or not. Any seedling plants that may spring up must persistently be pulled out to prevent the ground from getting matted with small roots. By not allowing any foliage to grow the larvæ of the asparagus beetle have no chance even to exist. These beetles are quite small, but their presence can readily be detected by their activity on the shoots and the many jet black nits attached.

Do not try to cut longer than two months at the furthest. If the cutting season is extended, the following year's crop is more or less injured, as the plant is not allowed time to recuperate and lay up stores for the vert and lay up stores for the next year's crop. It will be well to sort out the shoots and have them as nearly as possible of a uniform length, making them up in bunches of either one or two pounds. If the tops are placed even, it is a simple matter to even the bottoms

Rubber bands are in every way superior and should always be used in preference to string for tying the bunches. They can be had at very low rates, and the time saved in tying as compared with string will more than cover the cost of purchase, not to mention the difference in neatness of appearance. Asparagus can be kept perfectly fresh and good for several days by placing in a cool room and immersing the bottoms of the shoots in an inch or two of wa-

For shipping short distances it will be more convenient to use trays, but for long distances boxes a little deeper than the length of the bunches will be neces-

ANOTHER SIMPLE BUNCHER.

Be sure to pack them in firmly and fill in about the tops with some soft padding to prevent injury to the asparagus if the boxes should be turned up-

The two bunchers suggested are of such simple construction that any handy person can make them. The first one is a buncher commonly used in France and requires little or no explanation except that the front piece slides backward or forward according to the length of the shoots. The second one has no movable parts. The tip end of the shoots is dropped through the wedge shaped opening and kept close together by the circular inclosure.

Improve the Mississippi.

The Chicago Farm, Field and Fireside says: "We cannot sympathize with the opposition in some quarters to the improvement of the Mississippi. It has been truthfully said that the Mississippi is not a southern river, but a national highway. It drains nearly two-thirds of the area of this country. The popula-tion of southern states that would be benefited by the navigation of the Mississippi river is only 12,177,424, while the northern states that would be benefited by its navigation have a population of 22, 796, 659.

Profitable Ensilage.

We see no reason why a system of ensilage should not prove profitable and beneficial to the south, says as good authority as The Southern Cultivator. food for horses it has been found satisfactory, but not as much so as for cattle It is not a question of relative value as food so much as the ability to secure an abundant supply of nutritious forage Another authority says Pea vines preserved in silos will keep more sheep cattle or horses to the acre than th blue grass regions of Kentucky and West Virginia.
